

ABSTRACT

A serine protease inhibitor capable of selectively inhibiting the enzymatic activity of a serine protease is provided. The serine protease inhibitor contains a serine protease inhibiting substance which binds to the substrate of a serine protease, thereby inhibiting the reaction of a serine protease with that substrate. The serine protease inhibitor is useful as an antithrombotic, a plasmin inhibitor, an agent for resisting a digestive enzyme, and an agent for curing disseminated intravascular coagulation.